VOL. VI. NO. 68

CHICAGO, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 21, 1900.

PRICE, 5 CENTS

A MEMORABLE SALE.

The recent sale of Flying Fox, wearer of the triple crown, and other cracks of the late Duke of Westminster's racing stable, caused an unusual sensation among English horsemen. Full details of the remarkable auction are now to hand and furnish highly interesting reading in view of the general attention attracted by the cabled dispatches. The statement is repeated in the exchanges that Mr. Gilpin was bidding for Orme's son on behalf of W. C. Whitney, but the latter has already denied this. In its story of the now historic sale the Field, of March 10 says, in part:

"It says a great deal for the vitality of the English turf when a team of nineteen horses in training, all in the same ownership, is disposed of for a total of 70,440 guineas, or an average of over 3,707 guineas. It must be remembered, too, that four of the lot were untried geldings; these four only aggregated 730 guineas, and this lowered the average very considerably. The fact is, however, that the late Duke of Westminster was widely recognized as the most successful breeder of the day, and, what is more important, the best judge of a thoroughbred in the kingdom. Then, too, a majority of the other eighteen who helped Flying Fox to make the enormous total at Kingsclere on Thursday were descendants in tail male of Doncaster, whose blood had such enormous influence on the English turf during the last twenty years.

"It had been a general opinion ever since the sale was announced that records would be broken in more than one instance; but we do not think that any one could possibly have guessed what an enormous draw the dispersal of the famous stud would be. The company was large, aristocratic and representative of the turf world. Foreign and American buyers helped to swell the throng of English turfites—of all degrees. Royalty was represented by the Prince of Wales and Prince Christian; the aristocracy by Lord Coventry, Lords William and Marcus Beresford, Lord Buchan and others; the Kingsclere stable by Frank Alexander and W. Low; trainers by John Porter, James and Alec Waugh, Sam Darling, William Stevens and many more; jockeyship by the brothers Mornington and Kempton Cannon and Sam Loates; breeders by Mr. Forrest Todd, Mr. James Russell, William Brice (who secured two nominations to Flying Fox from the horse's new owner). Taylor Sharpe and a host of others; while men whose colors are frequently conspicuous on the course were as thick as autumn leaves. Ladies there were, too, in fair numbers, and by the actual time of the sale the whole country side had turned out, there being two or three hundred carriages on the road when all was over.

"Calveley and Flying Fox monopolized chief attention and the great horse never looked better in his life. Though the year is yet so young he carried little or no superfluous flesh, and was, indeed, as hard as a cricket ball and as bright as a star. Four better or finer legs we never saw on a thoroughbred; but, considering his size, his hocks are undoubtedly somewhat far from the ground, and his arms rather short. The most wonderful thing about him just now is the muscular development on his shoulder and neck, and here it may be mentioned that Flying Fox never carries any flesh on his flanks. As many of our readers will know, the horse has never been great in substance, but the fact is that what substance he has got he carries in the proper places, and never where it is only an encumbrance. On Thursday one could count his ribs, and yet the horse was quite the reverse of thin. In appearance he has undoubtedly improved, and, as has always been the case with him, the more he is examined the more difficult it is to find a fault. Of course, there was never any horse foaled about whom nothing in disparagement could be said, but if we remark that Flying Fox might be an inch and a half longer in the neck, and had rather a prettier head—without the drooping ears—we have said all that we can possibly urge against him. Good Luck, a handsome chestnut gelding by Royal Hampton, and a frequent winner last year, was the first to come under the hammer, and considering his unsexed condition, he made good value when knocked down to James Waugh for 2,100 guineas. Next came Goblet, one of the prettiest horses in training, but just a little small. Mr. Joel and Mr. Bird, who manages Sir J. B. Maple's stud, were the chief bidders for the gray, and eventually he was secured by the last named gentleman at 5,000 guineas. He is in most of the spring handicaps and is just the sort to win the Jubilee Stakes at Kempton.

"Missel Thrush, who followed Goblet, has a wonderful pedigree, is a beautifully topped colt, but has never run. Indeed, he has never been properly trained, his legs being unfortunately inclined to unsoundness. As a stallion he may be valuable, and that something is thought of him was evidenced when he was bought for the young Duke of Westminster for 900 guineas. Vane, who won the Bretby Stakes last year, has grown into a regular beauty, and as she walked around the ring she showed the manners and action of a real hereditary high-flyer. Had she been better engaged she would have brought a lot of money; but, as it is, she is cheap at 4,300 guineas, if only on account of her stud value. A burst of cheering followed the announcement that she had been bought by the Prince of Wales, and she will some day be a valued addition to the wondrous collection of matrons at the Sandringham Stud. Manchuria, on her form of last year, was well sold to Mr. Joel for 2,300 guineas, and Calveley, purchased by Sir John Thursby at only 100 guineas less than 9,000, was even a better sale. We do not mean to say the horse is not worth the money, but he is fully exposed, top weight in the handicaps, and is already five years old. Perhaps we shall now see him have a cut at Flying Fox for the Ascot Cup with Mr. George Thursby in the saddle.

"There was a buzz of admiration when Flying Fox was led into the ring, and quickly it was announced that the reserve was 30,000 guineas. For a moment no one offered an advance, and then Mr. Joel bid a thousand over the reserve. M. Blanc joined in, and after a while Mr. Gilpin. Mr. Joel dropped out at 34,000 guineas, and with the match afterward confined to the other pair, M. Blanc stayed the longest and secured the horse at 37,500 guineas. Flying Fox will, we understand, be removed from Kingsclere, but it is his owner's intention to have him trained for the Ascot Cup.

"From the appended summary of the sale will be seen that three of the lot were purchased for the young Duke of Westminster:

"Good Luck, by Royal Hampton—Farewell, J. Waugh, 2,100 guineas; Goblet, by Hampton—Sterling Love, E. Bird, 5,000 guineas; Missel Thrush, by Orme—Throstle, Duke of Westminster, 900 guineas; Vane, by Orme—Vampire, H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, 4,300 guineas; Manchuria, by Orme—Gantlet, S. B. Joel, 2,300 guineas; Calveley, by St. Serf—Sandway, Sir J. Thursby, 8,900 guineas; Flying Fox, by Orme—Vampire, M. E. Blanc, 37,500 guineas; Alderney, by Orme—Jersey Lily, P. Gilpin, 270 guineas; Granite, by Grey Leg—Bright Alice, Oliver, 650 guineas; Garb Or, by Bend Or—Bright Alice, T. Simpson Jay, 1,900 guineas; Ormenus, by Orme—Ruth S., Darling, 1,700 guineas; Grey Bird, by Grey Leg—Throstle, Duke of Westminster, 1,900 guineas; Skimmery, by Orme—St. Mary, Mr. Weatherby, 590 guineas; Rydal Mount, by Bend Or—Windermere, Duke of Westminster, 1,700 guineas; Quest, by Orme—Quetta, Brodrick Cloets, 1,000 guineas; Mail, by Bend Or—Gantlet, P. Gilpin, 450 guineas; Bright, by Sheen—Ornament, C. J. Langland, 130 guineas; Conform, by Orme—Console, J. Porter, 25 guineas; Churton, by Grey Leg—Petal, T. Nolan, 125 guineas."

GOSSIP OF THE TURF.

Eddie Jones, who left San Francisco with his father for England last Wednesday, will sail on March 24 from New York. The jockey will carry with him letters of introduction to some of the prominent owners. He also has a statement from the California Jockey Club which shows that he is in good standing on this side. "I expect to arrive in England in time for the Liverpool meeting," said Jones, while bidding his friends good-bye. "I am told that this is a good meeting, and before it is over I hope to get some mounts. I know several owners and trainers whom I think will be able to help me out. A great many people wonder why I am going over there to ride. Well, I will tell you. The high weights is the inducement more than anything else. I am getting heavy and to do 100 pounds, which you have got to do here to get mounts, it hurts me. Over there I won't have to train down so much, and I think I will make just as much money. If I only can start well I know I will be all right."

At Senator Porter Ashe's Ruinart Stock Farm, in Sonoma county, last Monday a filly foal, like Macduff, was "from her mother's womb untimely ripped," and is today a lively little orphan that may live to do credit to her illustrious lineage. Some time during the day the mare Trance was found with a leg broken, and the member was so badly shattered that Dr. Summerfield, the veterinary surgeon, decided that it was impossible to save her. She was due to foal to Ruinart, and it was resolved to save the foal if possible. Chloroform was administered, and the same operation which brought the immortal Caesar into the world was performed. At first the foal showed no signs of life, but artificial respiration was employed and succeeded. The filly, for such was its sex, soon was able to stand up, and is today running about the corral and enjoying life. Trance was brought to this state from Australia by J. D. Lewis, the owner of Tarcoola, who raced her with some success over the local tracks. She unfortunately slipped her foal last year, and the one this year has been anxiously expected, as the mare's breeding was considered to be just the proper cross with Ruinart.—San Francisco Breeder and Sportsman.

Of jockey Shaw's case a dispatch from New Orleans yesterday said: "The most important incident in the races today, the first day of the spring meeting of the New Louisiana Jockey Club, was the serving of a notice on jockey W. Shaw to leave the premises. It was not generally known that Shaw was under suspicion, but it came out today that the stewards have been watching his riding carefully for some time, expecting some day to catch him in commission of some wrong-doing. They did not succeed in convicting him of any particular charge, but found out enough to satisfy them that he has been in the hands of a gang whose intentions were not for the betterment of racing. After he rode Kyrat in the mile

HANDICAP ODDS.

Ante-post betting on the big eastern handicaps is reported to be unusually brisk in New York, with the peculiar feature that, despite the fact she is the topweight in all, Imp has been heavily backed for the Metropolitan, Brooklyn, Suburban and Brighton, and in each is now the favorite at less than 10 to 1. Kris Kringle has also come in for so much support that the odds against him have been lowered from 60 to 1 to 20 to 1. Other horses substantially backed recently are Jean Beraud, Zoroaster, Manue, Kinley Mack, Approval, Firearm, Half Time, Jack Point, Sidney Lucas, Lieber Karl and Algol. The latest odds quoted by Goodwin Bros. on the Metropolitan, Brooklyn and Suburban are as follows:

and a half handicap, Mitchell was ordered substituted for him on Tom Kingsley in the next race. The change was made after the betting had started, and the announcement
caused an immediate drop in Tom Kingsley's odds from 5 to 1 to 2 to 1. Shaw was allowed to ride Sylvian, a supposed good thing, in the final event, and that wound him up. Shaw is the jockey whom 'Pittsburg Phil' engaged some time ago to ride for him this summer in the east. He will be at liberty to fill his engagements, as he has not been suspended or ruled off."

NOTES OF THE TURF.

"Horses in Training," a very useful publication giving all the stables' lists of the country, will be issued by its publisher, Mr. H. A. Buck, about March 30. It has been mainly compiled by "Rataplan," and is reported to be complete and accurate in all details. A limited number of copies will be on sale at this office shortly after the date named.

D. C. R., Chicago.—Your wager on the Licalzi entry for place should be paid on the basis of what the odds would have been had Donna
Rita and Nailor been coupled in the place betting as well as in the straight betting, that is to say presumably 1 to 2.

The Breeder and Sportsman says that J. B.
Haggin will ship at least 200 yearlings to England this year and dispose of them there at public sale. In addition to these about the same number will be sold in New York.

During his racing career the late Duke of Westminster won 344 races of the total value of £301,614. As he started in 1876 he made a very fair income in stakes.

Winner—Ch. g, by Knight of Ellerslie—Banana.

Went to post at 3:00. At post 5 minutes. Start good. Won easily; second the same. Plantain was best and went to the front when ready. He was never fully extended and won impressively. Shinfane made up much ground and finished strongly. Swordsmen and Dissolute quit in the last eighth. Nailier showed a sharp turn of speed and ran a good race but was out-clasped by Plantain.
